Wood is a natural, organic product with many different characteristics, graining and attributes that are not defined by any single species. The differing features in wood, such as grain and color variation, bring out the natural beauty of the individual pieces. Each piece of wood is unique and no two pieces look the same, which further magnifies the beauty of the windows and doors.

Over time, the color of wood will vary or age causing it to darken. This is an inherent, natural process of wood and is not considered a defect. The application of stains can accentuate this darkening in wood components.
